Senior Prophecy

"Shut up, you guys!" yells Jerry as he bangs on the desk and continues, "This is the last class meeting of the Senior Class of 1950. We probably won't ever meet again as a group. We will split up after graduation tomorrow and in ten years we most likely won't know where any of our classmates are or what they are doing. But we haven't much time and there isn't any time for sentiment. Is there any old business to finish before we are dissolved?"

The kids answer, "No," and slid back their chairs eager to leave. Then Keith Hunter pops up with, "Hey, Jerry, I mean, Mr. President, I haven't any new business, but your talking about ten years from now gives me a chance to mention my new invention. It's a time-machine and if you'll take a chance I can try to send you ten years into the future."

This announcement stuns the kids and creates a deafening silence in the room. Then some brave souls speak up with, "I'm game, let's go"; "Come on, let's try it", and other declarations of enthusiasm.

"Just come over to our house tonight and we'll try it. It's out in the barn and after chores I'll have lots of time to fool around."

"Oh, no!" everybody shouts, "let's not wait until night; let's go right now."

"Are you kidding? R. J. will never let us go and Mr. Ballagh would just about die."

But they decide to sneak out so Jerry gives Vice-President Jack his only job of the year and sends him out to get R. J.'s attention while we all sneak out the fire escape.

Mr. Barney hears the racket we make as we tear down the stairs, and runs out of the basement just in time to meet us at the foot of the fire escape. Keith, Merle, and Shirley, who are in a hurry to get to their cars, run past, leaving him standing with his mouth open. He is so stunned he doesn't even think fast enough to grab one of us and demand an explanation.

We divide up and pile into the three cars. It makes it rather crowded, but we never did mind that.

Just as we're leaving, a cry for help is heard from the top of the other fire-escape, and Jack pursued by R. J., charges down the steps and jumps into Shirley's car.

We arrive at Hunter's a little squashed but still eager for the experiment and dash to the barn. When we enter we see Karl, and Keith gives him heck for loafing in the barn instead of ditching as he is supposed to be doing. After Karl agrees to run the machine for us, and we have examined the hideous contraption a few minutes, we get in it. It is a slight chore to convince Betty to join us in the machine, but when she sees Virg Hewitt is going she gets in too.

Keith shouts to Karl to throw the switch to the right, and a scene flashes before us show a group of seven or eight-year olds. We recognize one as Patsy Yaroch with her long pigtails and Walt is playing pony, trying to drive her using the pigtails as reins. He has his cowboy suit on and thinks he is really something. Elaine is standing watching, and we see her coat is buttoned crooked. Keith yells to Karl that he has thrown the switch the wrong way, and Karl says he couldn't see for the smoke and throws it the opposite way.

We seem to be entering a large ranch, and the sign over the gate reads: Grandma Hunter's Dude Ranch, Proprietor, John Hunter. This must be the site of the reunion of our class because we see a huge banner which says, "Welcome to the Class of 1950."

Just then Joann Ignash arrives, and Grandma Hunter runs out to greet her and admire her two sets of twins. "Two boys and two girls, isn't that nice," Grandma says. She tells Joann how much she wishes there were a girl in her family. Seems her grandchildren are all boys.

Joann goes in to register and gasps to see Merle Koth there. He is the bookkeeper here; Mrs. Hunter chose her best bookkeeping student we guess.

We see the ranch's station wagon returning from meeting the last train and are happy because we will see how more of us will be in ten years, but the only one who gets out is Julia. She has so many kids and bags of diapers that the driver, Slats, has to make another trip to bring the rest of the passengers.

Next, a l-o-n-g black limousine arrives driven by none other than Miss Yaroch, the famous love-lorn columnist, and Miss Geyer, the Angora cat-breeder, is with her. These two old maids hate men so much that they wouldn't even have one for a chauffeur. Quite a change from school days.

As guests arrive, they all go into the ranch house to eat a delicious luncheon prepared by Mrs. Hunter's prize cook, Anna Mae.

After lunch some of the guests want to go riding, and they certainly are surprised to see Jim Popham lead the horses out to them. He always was fond of horses!

Slats comes back with the second load which includes our old friends, Elfrieda, now the famous actress who plays motherly parts on the screen, and Walt Luecke, who's made use of his natural ability to talk and has become a politician. He's thinking of reviving the "Know Nothing" party and running for president next election.

A white-haired woman gets out of the truck and we wonder who it could be; surely not a member of our class. It must be our class sponsor, but just then Walt's telling Grandma Hunter that his mother couldn't come because she's still teaching school and is taking the seniors on a cruise. Finally we recognize the white-haired lady as Virg Hewitt. She was widowed early in life and it caused the thing she always feared, white hair.

A sudden bellow is heard from the barn, and Julia dashes out to the rescue of her little boy. He found out the horse didn't like to have his tail pulled. We're surprised Julia hadn't taught him how to behave around horses by now. He has a small gash on his head so Virg Hewitt insists on calling a doctor. She dashes to the house and picks up the phone. A very surprised look comes over her face as she recognizes the operator as Betty Toner. They start gossiping until Virg finally remembers why she called. After she gets the doctor and explains the case he says that he'll send his most efficient nurse, Elaine, out to see the boy, after which Virg takes a minute to remind Betty to come to the reunion.

During this interval almost everyone has arrived, and since there is so much talent in our midst, Mrs. Hunter suggests we have some entertainment before dinner. Jim McPhee is selected as Master of Ceremonies, and he quickly organizes a program. In his warming-up talk he brings out the fact that he married a daughter of a CBS executive and is now sixth vice-president in charge of producing romantic serials for CBS. Jim introduces Jack Nelson, the famous crooner, who will sing "A Dreamer's Holiday." Jack makes a few "corny" remarks after which the first chords of the tune are struck, but instead of starting on cue Jack stands silent staring at the door. Suddenly he begins to sing "Nature Boy." The reason is seen when all the people turn around and see a heavily bearded, shaggy-haired man standing there. Jim Popham is the first to break the silence by exclaiming, "Keith." Then his whole story comes out, how he had become discouraged five years before he couldn't sell any of his inventions and had gone into hibernation to escape these cruel people. He makes quite a realistic hermit we think.

After the excitement has died down, Jack finishes his song and Jim begins to announce the next number, but is interrupted by a burst of laughter in the corner. It's just Jacqueline amusing the children by teaching them deaf and dumb signs. She just can't quit working.

The next thing on the program is movies of Shirley Upthegrove, world explorer. These movies show unusual spots she has visited.

The applause dies down after Shirley's short talk on her movies and Jim introduces Willetta, now the famous opera singer. She has just returned from a trip to Reno, where she divorced another husband. She has been married so often that her agent never knows what name to put on her checks.

A peal of trumpeters is heard and Jerry Cornett, now Baron Von Cornett enters the room accompanied by his beautiful wife. He finally got that title he wanted so much by marrying a rich and beautiful Baroness.

The last thing on the program is a piano solo by the famous concert pianist, Virginia Brade. After this pleasing entertainment we adjourn to dinner.

Midway through the dinner when everyone is talking about how nice this reunion has been, someone screams as a tramp walks in through the door. He looks suddenly very much ill-at-ease when he sees the people in the room. When Mrs. Hunter offers him something to eat he says that he's not hungry, has to go, and other feeble excuses. Jim McPhee starts up at the sound of his voice and runs over and throws his arms around his old friend, Jim Gottschalk!

A clanging is heard, the machine coughs, sputters, and stops and our vision of the future is ended.

Class Will

Be it remembered, That we The Seniors of Kinde High of 1950 in the County of Huron and State of Michigan, being in a near-loony state of mind and in a complete exhaustion and being aware of the dangers in this atomic age, do hereby make, execute, and declare this to be Our Last Will and Testament, in manner following:

- First, Being broke, we hope that our teachers will pay in full all our debts and funeral expenses since they drove us to our death by so much hard work.
- Second, We give, devise and bequeath the following:
To the Juniors, who gave us all our sorrows, we will a double portion of tribulations.
(That's enough for them!)
- Third, To the Sophomores we leave patience and a sense of humor which is very needed so that they can withstand the Juniors, who will be such conceited Seniors. We also give them our good manners, our good looks, our expert athletic abilities, our outstanding scholastic records, and our good personalities.
- Fourth, To the naive Freshmen we leave our sedate manner and pleasing smiles that have won us our way through high school.
- Fifth, To our slave-driving teachers we will our discarded school books and comic books and an additional gray hair from each of us. Also the boys leave to them all their stray hair-pins.
- Sixth, To Sid we leave all our autographs carved in the desks. They'll be worth a lot of money some day! We also will him an easy chair and a new spittoon to replace the tomato can.
- Seventh, To Mrs. Barney, the school secretary, we will a magic-eye so she can find the students when they receive phone calls.
- Eighth, We leave our class picture for public display on the wall. You lucky public!
- JIM POPHAM wills his back seat and black beard to Karl Hunter. Also he leaves his ability to keep his mouth shut to Don King.
- PAT YAROCH wills her eleven o'clock curfew to Donna Mousseau, and her inability to get a man to Helen Marie Luecke.
- WILLET TA SAWYER wills her ability to lose weight to Geraldine Moore, and would like to leave her heart to someone but thinks that it is too worn from being tossed back and forth so much.
- SHIRLEY UP THE GROVE wills all her car troubles to Rink Everingham. Also she leaves the kiss she received from Merle in the tenth grade to Dorothy Hagle.
- JIM GOTTSCHALK wills his grade-school flirtations to Eddie Moore, and his ability to square-dance to Don Brade.
- GERALD LACKIE wills his long-term managership of the football team to Billy Styles.
- VIRGINIA HEWITT wills her ability to win a man to Mary McLeod, her job as librarian to anyone who wants it, and her laugh to Edna Miller.
- JERRY CORNETT wills his shyness and red face to Ken Wahl, and leaves his ability to get along with the opposite sex to Jim Hall.
- BETTY TONER wills nothing to nobody.
- ANNA MAE POPHAM wills "Little Art A." to Irene Goreski, and her quiet manner to Dorothy Merrick.
- JACKIE MOELLER wills her love affairs to Dorothy McKim, her natural ability to lead cheers to Donna Richardson, and her swing to Geraldine Moore.

WALT LUECKE wills his thick, curly hair to Mr. Barney.

ELAINE MEAGHER wills her quiet manners in class to Mary Dondineau.

JOANN IGNASH wills her high heels to Mrs. Barney.

MERLE KOTH wills his shyness to Richard Schott, and his height to Lee Case.

JACK NELSON wills his straight hair to Glen Toner, and his clothes to Joan Rice and Juanita Robbins. Also he leaves himself to Dolores Majestic.

KEITH HUNTER wills his ability to sell candy to any Junior who wants the job, and his ability to sleep in class to Richard Krzewski.

ELFRIEDA JAHN wills her job in the kitchen to whoever wants to wash dishes.

VIRGINIA BRADE wills her blond hair and blue eyes to Gerty Parks, and her musical abilities to Joyce Hagle.

JIM MCPHEE wills part of the Yankees to Bob Luecke, and his way with the teachers to Emil Majestic.

JULIA WOOLWORTH wills "Don" to anyone who can put up with him. Also she leaves her hair to Donna Mousseau.

DOROTHY GEYER wills her blind dates to Jean Jahn.

We hereby appoint the forth-coming Kindergarten of Kindle School executORS of this Our Last Will and Testament.

Lastly, we do hereby revoke all former, any, and every Will heretofore made by us.

In Testimony Whereof, we have hereunto set our hand and seal, the 1st day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and 50.

Our brave boys under the leadership of Coach Barney started playing football this year.

Their first game was played in pouring rain on a mud puddle of a field. Our boys poured on the steam and after the half only allowed Port Austin to make one touchdown. The final score was 21-0.

The following week our boys journeyed to Owendale and emerged from the game with another defeat and also the first injury. Merle Koth suffered the loss of four front teeth. The final score was 26-0.

Hip-hip-hooray! We made our first touchdowns in the next game when we met Ubly. Our boys played a very good game this time and even though we lost, Kinde rooters were very proud of their team. Jim McPhee scored Kinde's 14 points. Ubly had 28 points.

The last game we played was against Bad Axe. The final score was 7-7. Our boys just missed the last needed touchdown by two yards at one time. Jim Gottschalk came through to score Kinde's third touchdown of the season.

The team voted Merle Koth as Honorary Captain.

All those lovely people you see above are members of the speech class begun this year. In order to help the class recognize their mistakes and correct them the school purchased a wire recorder. It is being used in the picture above.

The speech class presented some assembly programs consisting of sketches they had worked out.

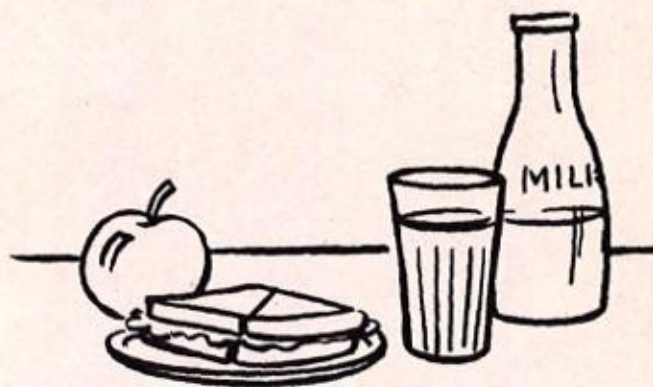

All in all, the kids all found the class to be interesting as well as educational.
